THIS DOCUMENT

One chart, read in two kinds of writing

Everything in this reading is either a fact of your chart or general education about the classical system. Each page says which.

YOUR CHART

Pages carrying this mark show values supplied for your chart: the eight characters, their phases, the Hidden Stems, the Ten Gods relations and the Wu Xing tally. They are printed as supplied and are the same wherever they recur in this document.

GENERAL EDUCATION

Pages carrying this mark explain the classical system itself. They are identical in every copy of this edition and are not based on your chart.

WHAT THIS REPORT GIVES YOU

Your eight chart characters, in full • The Ten Gods relations named against your Day Master • The Hidden Stems your Branches carry • Your supplied Wu Xing tally • Long-form interpretation from the approved content layer

WHAT IT DELIBERATELY LEAVES OUT

Day Master strength and rooting • A nominated favourable element • Predictive statements about events • Luck pillars, annual transits, lucky numbers, colours or directions • Any remedy or health correspondence

Every character on this page is supplied for your chart and repeats unchanged on its own page. Nothing here is derived, ranked or weighted by the report.

CHAPTER 02 • THE FOUR PILLARS

Your Four Pillars

READING KEY • STEM

The visible upper character of a pillar. Each stem carries a phase and a Yin or Yang polarity.

READING KEY • BRANCH

The lower character. A branch holds one to three Hidden Stems, listed by Qi order.

READING KEY • TEN GODS

Each visible stem's classical relation to your Day Master. The Hidden Stems' relations follow on page 11.

● WOOD 木 ● FIRE 火 ● EARTH 土 ● METAL 金 ● WATER 水

Chart values are supplied by the validated chart engine. Hidden Stems are listed in Qi order: principal, central, residual. Animal names are associations of the Earthly Branch, not a replacement for it. Colour marks one character at a time; the Day pillar's gold edge is a selection, not a phase.

Reading the pillars

Heavenly Stems 天干 are ten characters. Each carries one of the Five Phases and a polarity, Yang or Yin, in strict alternation. Your chart shows four of the ten, one per pillar.

Earthly Branches 地支 are twelve characters. Each also carries a phase, and each traditionally travels with an animal. The animal is a label for the Branch, never the Branch itself, which is why every Branch here is printed as its character.

Hidden Stems 藏干 are the Stems a Branch is said to contain, listed in Qi order: principal first, then central, then residual where present. They are supplied with your chart and are laid out on page 11.

The Day Master 日主 is the Stem of the Day pillar. Every other Stem in the chart, visible or hidden, is named by its relation to this one character. Those names are the Ten Gods, introduced on page 10.

Order: Year, Month, Day, Hour; Stem above Branch. Colour marks the phase of one character at a time.

GOOD TO KNOW

A pillar is not a unit of colour. Its Stem and its Branch usually belong to different phases, so this report never tints a whole column. Where a phase is shown, it belongs to exactly the character beside it.

YIN METAL · DAY MASTER

STEM	辛 · 8th of 10
PHASE	Metal 金 jīn
POLARITY	Yin 阴
DAY PILLAR	辛亥 xīn hài
SOURCE	Validated chart engine

The halo marks the phase of this one character. It is a fact of the Stem, not an assessment of its strength.

CHAPTER 03 · DAY MASTER

Your Day Master is Yin Metal

The Day Master is the single character the whole reading is oriented around: the Stem of your birth day.

GENERAL In classical BaZi the Day Stem stands for the person themselves; every other Stem in the chart is described by its relation to it. Xīn is the 8th of the ten Heavenly Stems and the Yin counterpart within Metal. In your chart it is paired with the Branch hài, forming the Day pillar 辛亥.

YOUR READING · DAY MASTER

This passage reads the Day Master itself: the character, its phase and its polarity, and how the tradition describes a chart that is oriented around it.

It is drawn from the approved content layer for Yin Metal and speaks about the character, not about outcomes. It does not assess strength or rooting and does not nominate a favourable phase. Read it as a description of a structure the following chapters return to, one part of the chart at a time.

YOUR READING · DAY PILLAR 辛亥

The Day pillar pairs your Day Master with the Branch hài (Water), which carries the Hidden Stems rén, jiǎ. Chapter 05 reads this pairing in full.

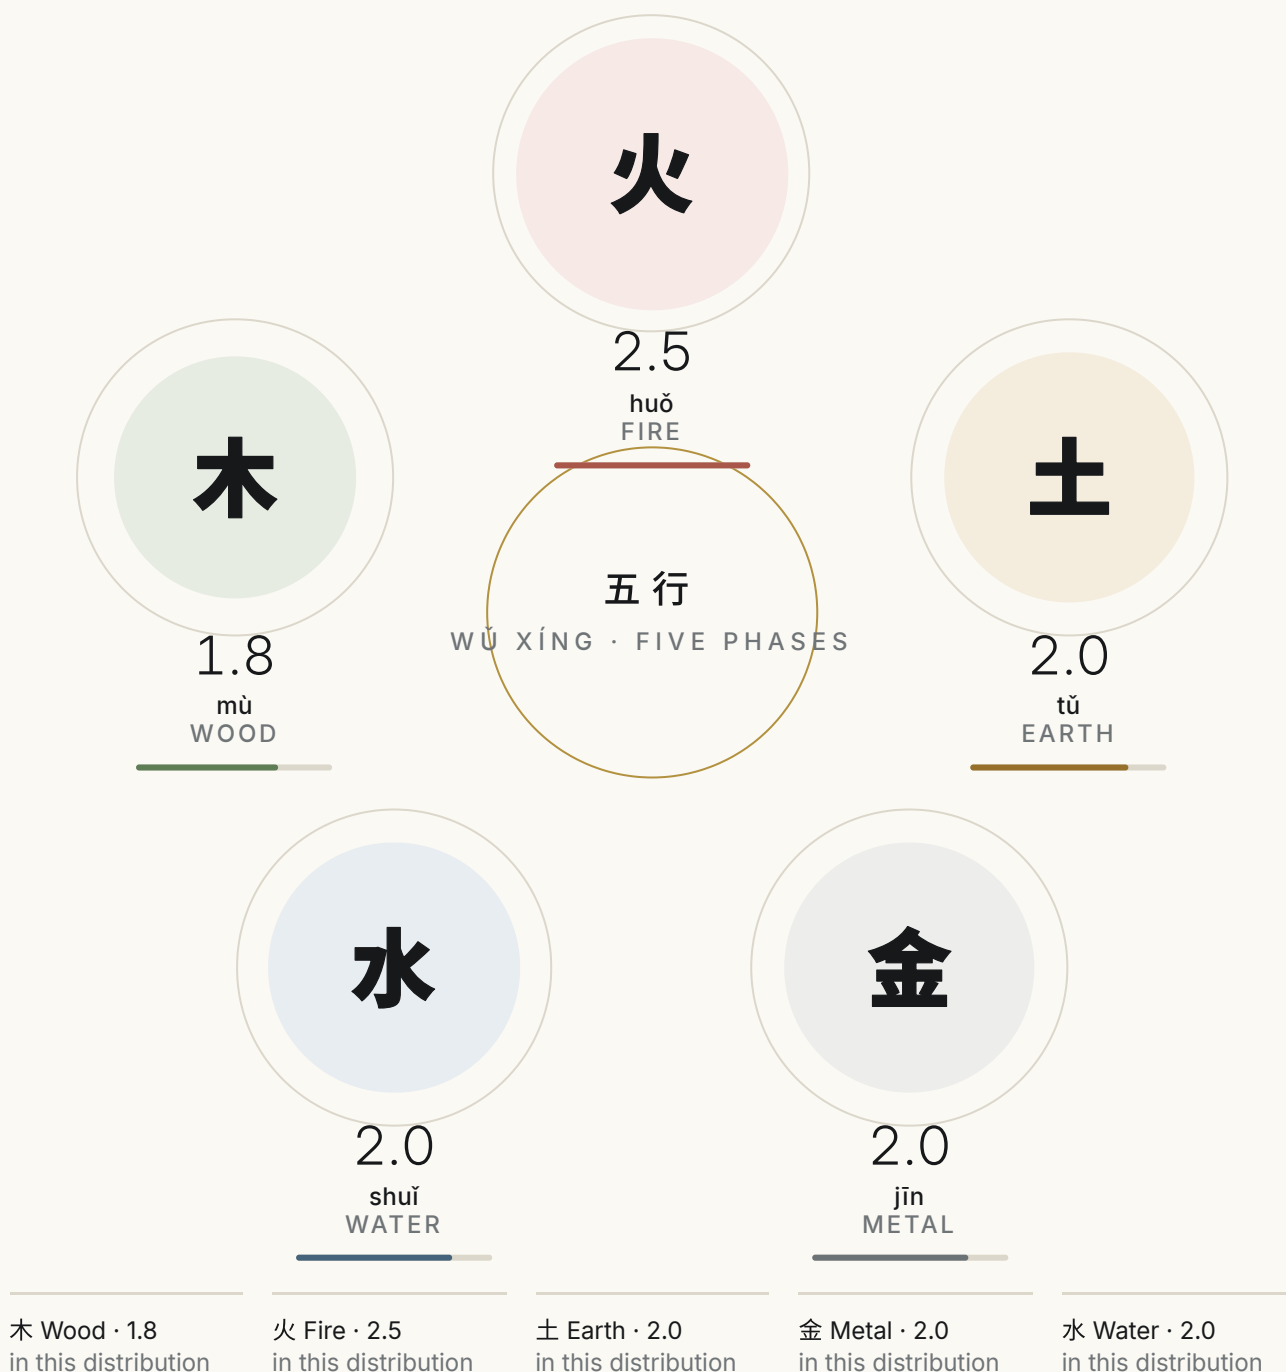

GOOD TO KNOW

Metal stems in the classical system: 庚 gēng (Yang) and 辛 xīn (Yin). This report describes the Day Master itself — it does not assess strength, rooting or favourable phases.

CHAPTER 05 · WU XING

Your Wu Xing Distribution

How the five phases are tallied across your Four Pillars, as supplied by the chart engine. Values are displayed as supplied; nothing here is a judgement of balance.

Values are read directly from the validated chart output. Disc size and bar length map each supplied value in proportion to the largest one and carry no further meaning. A value of 0 is shown as "0 in this distribution" — a tally of zero, never a deficiency. The Five Phases themselves are introduced on the next page as general education.

The Five Phases

Wu Xing names five phases of transformation. Each Heavenly Stem and each Earthly Branch belongs to one of them. This page introduces the five as a set; it is identical in every copy of this edition and is not based on your chart.

HOW TO READ THIS PAGE

The five phases are shown as five equal categories. The order on this page is the customary listing order and implies no ranking. Each phase's Stems and Branches are listed so you can find your own characters on the previous pages.

NOT A PERSONAL DIAGNOSIS

Your own tally is on the previous page. The classical relationships between individual phases are outside the scope of this edition and are not drawn here.

Pinyin with tone marks: mù, huǒ, tǔ, jīn, shuǐ. Earth holds four Branches; each other phase holds two.

CHAPTER 04 • TEN GODS 十神

Ten Gods overview

Each Stem in your chart, visible or hidden, is named by its classical relation to your Day Master. There are ten such names. This page lists all ten and marks which of them your chart carries, and where.

● VISIBLE STEM ○ HIDDEN STEM — NOT PRESENT

WHAT A TEN GOD IS

A name for the relation between one Stem and the Day Master, derived from their phases and polarities. The Day pillar's own Stem is the Day Master itself and carries no relation name.

WHAT THIS TABLE DOES NOT SAY

Presence is presence. A filled mark is a visible Stem; an open mark is a Hidden Stem inside a Branch. The table ranks nothing and counts nothing; it shows where each name occurs in your chart as supplied.

Terminology is set in the informational Chinese text face with tone-marked pinyin. Relations are supplied with your chart and repeat unchanged on pages 05 and 11.

CHAPTER 04 · HIDDEN STEMS 藏干

Hidden Stems

Each Earthly Branch carries one to three Stems. They are listed in Qi order — principal, central, residual — each with its own phase and its own relation to your Day Master.

	YEAR BRANCH wǔ Fire · Horse	 dīng principal	Seven Killings 七杀 Qī Shā	 Fire
		 jǐ central	Indirect Resource 偏印 Piān Yīn	 Earth

TWO LAYERS OF THE SAME CHART

Visible Stems are the upper row of your pillars; Hidden Stems are what the Branches carry. Both are named against the same Day Master, so this page and page 05 can be read side by side.

COLOUR, ONE CHARACTER AT A TIME

Every Hidden Stem shows its own phase field. A Branch's phase is never inherited by the Stems it carries, and the Branch's own field belongs to the Branch alone.

Hidden Stems, their phases, Qi roles and relations are supplied with your chart. Where a value is not supplied, the cell stays empty rather than inferred.

CHAPTER 04 • HOW TO READ THIS READING

The chart is fixed. The reading is a tradition.

Four Pillars is a structural language before it is anything else. This chapter explains what the report does with it, what it leaves out, and how to tell one from the other on every page.

A BaZi chart is not a verdict written about you. It is eight characters, four Heavenly Stems above four Earthly Branches, set out in four columns for the year, month, day and hour of a birth. They come from a calendar system used in China for well over two thousand years, and the arrangement itself is mechanical: given a moment and a declared day boundary, the eight characters are fixed. Two people born in the same hour in the same place receive the same eight.

What follows from those characters is a different matter, and that difference is why this report is built the way it is. The chart facts are deterministic. The reading is interpretation, a tradition of relating the characters to one another, developed over centuries, with schools that disagree. Bazodiac keeps the two visibly apart rather than blending them into one confident voice. Chart pages carry a provenance line naming where their values came from. Reading pages are marked as reading.

What the chart pages show

Every character on a chart page is set as real text in a real typeface, never drawn and never generated. Where one appears large, it also appears complete: a Stem or a Branch is never cropped for effect. Pinyin always carries its tone marks, because without them a syllable is ambiguous. A Branch is never swapped for its animal. The animal is a traditional association that travels with the Branch, and it is shown as a secondary label so that the character remains the fact and the animal remains the association.

Colour is used sparingly and always locally. A field of colour classifies exactly one thing at a time: this Stem, that Branch, this one Hidden Stem. A whole pillar is never tinted, because a pillar holds a Stem and a Branch that usually belong to different phases, and a single wash over both would be a claim the chart does not make. The Day Master is set apart with a quiet gold edge on a neutral ground. Gold is a selection, not a sixth phase.

"Everything marked Your chart came from validated chart data. Everything marked General education is identical in every copy."

What this edition deliberately leaves out

Some things are absent on purpose. This edition does not calculate the strength of a Day Master, does not nominate a favourable element, does not draw luck pillars or annual transits, and prints no lucky numbers, colours or directions. None of that is an oversight. Each would require a method this report has not committed to, and printing it anyway would mean asserting something the report cannot support. Where a page shows a count, the count is a count: a zero in the Wu Xing distribution means the tally is zero, not that something is missing from you.

KEY INSIGHT

Read the chart pages and the reading pages as two different kinds of writing. One reports what your chart contains. The other explains a system that existed long before your chart did. Where the two meet, the page says so.

That restraint has a cost and a benefit. The cost is that you will not find a sentence telling you what will happen. The benefit is that everything you do find can be traced, either to a character in your chart, to a named relationship between characters, or to a labelled piece of general education. If a passage cannot be traced to one of those, it does not belong in this document, and it is not here.

How the following chapters are built

Each interpretive chapter opens with the part of the chart it refers to, named in the running head, so you always know which characters a passage is about. A short highlighted sentence marks the one idea the chapter turns on. A Key insight panel, where present, restates the practical point in plain words. Chapters are written to be read in order, but each one stands on its own, and nothing in a later chapter overrides an earlier one.

You may find that some passages describe you well and others do not. That is expected, and it is not a failure of the chart or of you. A classical reading describes a structure and the tendencies traditionally associated with it. What you do with a structure is the part that stays

CHAPTER 10 • BRINGING IT TOGETHER

A structure, not an instruction

The chapters before this one read the chart one part at a time. This page sets the eight characters side by side again and leaves three questions with you.

庚	壬	辛	乙
午	午	亥	未
YEAR	MONTH	DAY	HOUR

01 Which passages held?

Note the chapters that described something you recognise, and the ones that did not. Both are information about how a classical structure meets one life; neither is a verdict.

02 Which characters recur?

Several relation names appear more than once in your chart. Return to pages 10 and 11 and see where they sit. A repeated name is a repeated pattern in the structure, not a repeated instruction.

03 What stays yours?

A chart describes a structure and the tendencies a tradition attaches to it. What is done with the structure is not in the chart and was never claimed to be.

These prompts are identical in every copy of this edition. They ask; they do not predict.

INCLUDED IN THIS EDITION

Eight characters · phases and polarities · Hidden Stems in Qī order · Ten Gods relations · supplied Wu Xing tally · general education on the Five Phases · interpretive chapters from the approved content layer.

DELIBERATELY NOT INCLUDED

Day Master strength · favourable element · luck pillars and annual transits · lucky numbers, colours, directions · remedies · health, financial or legal correspondences · predictions of any kind.

Values on this page are the same values shown on pages 04 to 11. Nothing is recalculated here.

CLOSING

What you do with it is the part that is yours.

A chart is a structure, not an instruction. It describes a pattern; it does not decide what you make of it. This reading set out eight characters, named the relations between them in the traditional vocabulary, and showed the classical system those names come from. It did not tell you what will happen, and it was not built to.

Prepared for A. Mustermann. Bazodiac is positioned as entertainment and reflection. It makes no predictive, medical, financial or legal claims.

METHOD NOTE & GLOSSARY

Conventions used in this edition

GLOSSARY

Heavenly Stem 天干 tiān gān

One of ten characters; the upper character of a pillar. Carries a phase and a polarity.

Earthly Branch 地支 dì zhī

One of twelve characters; the lower character of a pillar. Travels with an animal label.

Hidden Stem 藏干 cáng gān

A Stem contained in a Branch. Listed in Qi order: principal, central, residual.

Day Master 日主 rì zhǔ

The Stem of the Day pillar. The reference point every other Stem is named against.

Ten Gods 十神 shí shén

The ten relation names between any Stem and the Day Master.

Wu Xing 五行 wǔ xíng

The Five Phases: Wood, Fire, Earth, Metal, Water. Each Stem and Branch belongs to one.

Polarity 阴阳 yīn yáng

Yin or Yang. Stems alternate strictly; the label is shown for every Stem.

Pinyin 拼音 pīn yīn

CONVENTIONS

CHART BASIS Four Pillars (Sìzhù): year, month, day, hour.

DAY BOUNDARY Midnight, as declared for this chart.

SCRIPT Simplified Chinese throughout.

HIDDEN STEMS Listed in Qi order as supplied; none derived.
